

THE DOLPHINS' SONG

We are the dolphins who fly through the seas, leaping and soaring
and twisting and falling and plunging so deep we are gone.

We are the dolphins who dive through the waves,
skimming and gliding
and swaying and sliding and suddenly speeding away.

We are the dolphins who race through the spray,
friends to each other
we know what we say,
we're friends to the humans,
we teach them to play.

We are the dolphins who dance round your boat,
spinning and circling,
first this side then that side
and over and under,
above and below you -
smiling, beguiling -
as, laughing, you
beg us to stay

as we float on the foam
and sink slowly down
until with a FLASH

we are home.
